Item 5 – Ms. Watkins presented information related to the Federal Attendance Policy and the current status of the Institutional Attendance and Withdrawal Policy. The Committee was asked to review the policy.

Results of discussion and actions of the Committee

Currently, a student is required to get a faculty signature after the 12th week of classes in order to withdraw from a course. With the advent of online courses and multiple types of course delivery modes, it has been observed that this policy has resulted in difficulty for both the student and the faculty member. The rationale for this policy was unclear, with no definite understanding of how the policy came to be, and thus a proposal was made to modify the policy. To make such a policy change, Academic Affairs needed to have the policy reviewed by a faculty committee with a recommendation on a proposal such that it can be presented to the Executive Counsel and to the Board of Regents. After discussion at the Curriculum Committee, the following recommendation was made and approved (T. Moore moved, J. Tate seconded):

“Recommend a change to the policy requiring a signature of the faculty member to allow a student to withdraw from a course after the 12th week, to remove the requirement for a signature by the faculty member.”

Upon approval by the Executive Committee and Board of Regents, this change would allow a student to withdraw from a course without a faculty member’s signature until the last day of instruction.

Additionally, per this current policy, a faculty member can not administratively withdraw a student after the 12th week of the semester. If you recall, there is a Federal requirement related to NOC’s ability to distribute financial aid that requires withdrawing students “no later than 14-days from the determination date (date of last attendance) including holidays, breaks, and weekends.” The inability of a faculty member not to be able to administratively withdraw a student after the 12th week has the potential to put us into conflict with the Federal requirement. Thus, the Curriculum Committee made and approved the following recommendation (K. Mitchell moved, J. Tate seconded):

“Recommend a change to the current policy to allow a faculty member to administratively withdraw a student up until the last day of instruction.”

Currently, this would be achieved using the Early Alert System.
Full faculty vote on the following occurred via email initiating on Nov. 16 2022

Item 2 – Meteorology - 32 Approve– 0 Disapprove, 0 Abstain
