As finals approach, many students suffer from test anxiety

by Misty McBlair

Red & Silver Review Staff Writer

Finals are here and many are cramming for the last test of the semester. Tests can be very stressful and sometimes painful depending on the student.

There are many types of test takers out there and depending on which one you are could mean an A or could mean a 0. For some test takers it comes easy to memorize and remember.

For some, they may need to study for a whole week and cram the night before the test. Then there are those with test anxiety. They study every day and their confident about taking the test, then when the test is placed in front of them their mind goes blank, and they forget everything. Then the panic sets in. At this point giving up seems like the only option. It's not the only option. There is help.

I suffer from test anxiety and have for many years and to this day tests still get my heart racing, and my mind goes blank. This began when I was in the 5th grade, and I honestly thought there was something wrong with me.

The teacher would hand out the tests and all the other kids went right to answering the questions. I read the 1st question and nothing, so I skip to the next and the next and before I realized I was the only one left and everybody else had finished. I thought to myself, "am I dumb? Will the other kids think I'm dumb?" And I began to cry.

My teacher talked to me after class, and I explained what happened and they said I could re-take the test tomorrow. The teacher's advice was to write down terms and definitions a few times and I tried it, and it did help.

I found that writing helped me remember. I took the test the next day and received a C. I was so happy to see a grade other than an F.

The answer was writing things down and it helped me tremendously. I'm not saying it works for everybody, but it helped me. There

Planetarium Show Thursday, Dec. 8

NOC Enid Planetarium Director Fritz Osell announced the "Star of Bethlehem" show on Thursday, Dec. 8 at 6 p.m. and 7:30 p.m.

There is no admission charge but food donations to the Our Daily Bread food pantry are accepted.

Osell will show what the sky over Babylon are other ways to study. Flash cards are a good way to give the memory a good workout and taking practice tests several times before the actual test.

It doesn't hurt to reach out to the professor, a friend or even a tutor if you find that you have test anxiety.

You will be surprised at how much they really want to help you succeed. To those that don't have trouble with testing If you know somebody that is struggling, maybe offer to help them study, you might be surprised at how much that could help a struggling student.

looked like to the Wise Men 2,000 years ago. Visitors will also see how planetary orbits and some complex mathematics combined with the alignments of the stars alerted the Persians in Babylon to events that had been prophesized by Daniel 500 years before.

Jets smash Mavs in Bedlam at Tonkawa

TONKAWA, Oklahoma -- The NOC Enid Jets shot a blistering 59% from the floor in a 104-64 rout of NOC Tonkawa Tuesday night in Tonkawa.

The Jets, now 3-0 in conference play, were led by Jordan Thompson with 23 points while Marcelle Perry added 16.

Despite the hot shooting, it was the Jets' defense that coach Chris Gerber emphasized.

"It was one of our best defensive efforts," Gerber said. "We didn't them anything easy in the first half and that was a key to the game."

Daylon Andrews, Raul Nunez, and Chalese Lee also reached double figures for the Jets.

Chris Wiseman led the Jets on the boards with 15 while Andrews added six assists.

The Jets also shot 43% from 3-point range.

After taking an 18-point lead into the dressing room at 42-24, the Jets scored 62 points in the second half.
